What are Eye Floaters and Spots?

Spots, which are often called floaters, are small specks, circles or clouds moving into your field of vision. Floaters are more easily seen when looking at a plain or light colored background. They are actually tiny clumps of gel located inside the vitreous which is the fluid that fills the inside of the eye. Floaters can form different shapes including: specks, strands and webs. When you see a floater in your vision you're actually seeing shadows of the spots on your retina. Spots may sound odd, but in fact almost everyone has them at one time but they are more noticeable with age.

During complete eye exams when your doctor looks into your eye with light they can see your inner eye and determine if you have any spots or floaters.

Contact Family Vision Center today to schedule your routine eye exam and get checked for spots and floaters.
